

M ost valuable part Understanding how I can present myself to show that I am an ally rather than someone who is judging others.

I think we all mean well, but that there is definitely much to be learned and much work to be done, especially as it ends up affecting the work we do with students.

The majority of the AUR community actively try to be inclusive, but given our demographics, I think it is hard for a lot of us to see that there is even an issue. The majority of us are coming from privileged places, so I think it is important that these issues are highlighted and we are all trained to deal with DEI on a daily basis.

Gender issues are an important part of my teaching:
the guiding goals of the Sustainable Devel opment Goals of No Poverty (SDG1), Zero Hunger (SDG2), Gender equality (SDG5) and Responsible Production and Consumption (SDG12) the Master highlights i) Analyses of disaggregated data on food insecurity on a global scale showing how women are more food insecure than men; ii) Gender as a critical factor in the intrahousehold allocation of resources and impact on nutrition; iii) Role of men and women in agricultural production in developing and developed countries; iv) gender roles in food consumption and sustainable
